

Israel Campus Beat Freelance Contributor:

Freelance Contributors will be invited to pitch story ideas to the editor-in-chief, and will be on call for writing opportunities as they arise. They may be invited to participate in editorial meetings and/or to work as part of reporting teams. They will receive editorial supervision from the editor-in-chief and (possibly) an editorial board that includes professional journalists. Students selected to serve as Freelance Contributors will be paid for their stories upon publication.

Responsibilities:

- Pitch stories to the editor-in-chief, who may also approach you with story ideas.
- Be in regular contact with the editor-in-chief regarding forming & editing stories.

Successful candidates will possess:

- A keen interest in Israel and knowledge about the pro-Israel community
- Journalism studies and/or proven writing and communication skills
- Experience with blogging, podcasting, and other online publishing a plus

Other qualifications:

- Applicants should be innovative, self-starting, energetic thinkers who are interested in sharing and implementing new ideas.
- Freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors are welcome to apply.
- A minimum 2.7 GPA is required

Compensation:

Freelance Contributors will be paid a negotiated rate (usually $50) per story, upon publication.

Duration:

Per article

To apply:

Completed applications must include the following items. Please note that these documents must be submitted together (except the letter of recommendation, which should be forwarded directly from the author) via e-mail to info@israelcampusbeat.org in a timely fashion.
